23 Runners

As the runners gathered on this cold and wet night, stories started to unfold on last week's AGPU.

We heard how some hashers preferred making love to the porcelain bowl then watching the strippers; some couldn't stomach the spew and asked to become honorary females for the night. There were tales from the taxi rides home, those who were refused taxi rides as well as who fell out of them! Many black eyes were seen, questions on how did they grazed their knees and why were their a*rses so sore!!! Stories of a swan dive to claim a prize but received a nice g*ash to an eye instead. There were lost horns and who can't remember a thing at all about the night... something to do with shooters!! Or was that hooters???

So back to tonight's run. Thanks to the new RA, the heavens opened up and the runners all got drenched. The trail was well marked, so there was no excuse for getting lost. Buddha, I have no idea where the runners ran, but they found their way through many side streets following the bright lights of Gravel Rash. I hear Elf, Spoofo and Nifty picked up trail through the underground car park of the Mitcham Shopping Centre out of the rain as the other runners kept on running.

Ken Oath was late back and left Gonefor freezing in the cold, as he had the car keys and, she was only wearing a condom (least she was dry). He said he stopped to help change a tyre!! Probably hiding in a bush to stay dry!!! . Poor old Elf, needed to send SOS on his return.

Not a bad run considering it was in memory of Jake!

On Up Jake!
